Sport and Politics Do Mix: Zed Seselja loses out as ACT Senator

The defeat of Zed Seselja by senator-elect and former sporting star David Pocock in the ACT has clearly exemplified what the 'cost' is in trying to appease the 'political left' by a conservative candidate – voter rejection.

“FamilyVoice has repeatedly urged Liberal Party parliamentary representatives in the ACT to expound their family-oriented views to the ‘true conservative believers’ without success with ‘no thanks’ to the Liberal Party who have opted instead for left-leaning campaigns in so-called progressive-leaning Canberra,” said Greg Bondar, FamilyVoice spokesman.

The loss of Zed Seselja is a sad day for politics in the ACT. Mr Seselja has always shown himself to be a true man of the people with family-oriented views along with his support for freedom of speech, religion, sanctity of human life, and freedom of association. Mr Seselja, who served in the Senate for nine years and who was appointed as Minister for International Development and the Pacific, was an outstanding senator for liberal principles in his time in public life.

“It will take a generational change to oust the dominant Labor and its government coalition partner the Greens in the ACT,” added Bondar.
