Making Monty Python proud

FamilyVoice Australia gender spokesman David d’Lima says a study of women’s pain that encompasses biological males would make the Monty Python comedy team proud.

“In a truly bizarre strategy, a Victorian taxpayer-funded inquiry into women’s pain will encourage the participation of men who identify as female,” David d’Lima said.

“The pains of childbirth are something no man can ever experience – a point not lost on the Monty Python.

“Yet with prescient insight in the otherwise squalid film The Life of Brian, came the wisdom that while no man can bear a child, we should nevertheless fight for the right.”
