Family group says restore parental rights in schools after woke toilet move

FamilyVoice Australia is calling for a restoration of parental rights following public concern about a lack of privacy in schools.

“The loss of privacy in school toilets is the latest example of gender ideology gone mad, in the foolish quest for sexual neutrality,” FamilyVoice Australia gender spokesman David d’Lima said.

“Schools must recognise they are neither agents of the state nor the proponents of radical ideology.

“Instead they operate in the place of parents to whom children are born and so schools must not operate without parental consent.

“We wonder how many mums and dads were consulted before the loss of privacy occurred through removing toilet doors.”

“Blair Boyer needs to urgently clarify whether woke Education Department policy still permits boys to use girls’ toilets.

“The safety and privacy of girls at school should not be compromised because of anti-science Rainbow ideology.”
