Westfield should not homosexualise Christmas

Christian advocacy group FamilyVoice Australia rejects a move by Westfield shopping centres in Western Australia that are set to turn family-friendly shopping malls into a day-long gay pride venue at Christmas.

“Christmas is a sacred time of year. It should not be highjacked to promote divisive sexual ideologies”, said FamilyVoice gender spokesman David d’Lima.

“Families visiting shopping centres should be confident that their children will not be exposed to the queer agenda when shopping.

“Mums and dads will have a hard time explaining why same-sex relationships should be celebrated, as they tend to be associated disproportionately with negative consequences for children.

“Every child needs a mum and dad, whenever possible, and that is something well worth celebrating every day of the year.”
